I. INTRODUCTION

This Court detailed the pleading defects in the original complaint and provided Plaintiffs a roadmap to cure them, but the Opposition hardly refers to the Court's order and fails to explain how, if at all, Plaintiffs corrected those deficiencies after discovering their monopolization case was "indeed a cartel action." (Opp. at 50 n.31.) Plaintiffs' new allegations, even apart from the use of improper group pleading and failure to allege facts specific to each Defendant, do nothing to address the fact that "it's a big jump to conclude that hundreds of direct purchasers up and down the West Coast were coerced into joining a price-fixing conspiracy." (Dkt. 59 at 4.) In their Opposition, Plaintiffs string cite hundreds of paragraphs from the Amended Complaint with little or no discussion of the facts purportedly contained in those allegations. That is because the lion's share of those allegations are conclusory, and those that contain some facts fail to support the propositions for which they are cited, or merely recount the idiosyncratic experiences of alleged buyer CI #1. None individually, or considered as a whole, supports Plaintiffs' claim that Defendants engaged in a nine-year, coastwide conspiracy involving themselves and untold numbers of other buyers.

Remarkably, Plaintiffs insist that the Amended Complaint pleads direct evidence of conspiracy. But even with discovery, leave to amend, and a new 450-paragraph pleading, Plaintiffs have not alleged any facts that would establish, without requiring any inferences, the existence of an agreement to coordinate ex vessel pricing among some 34 Defendants and other buyers throughout the ports of the Pacific Northwest since 2016.

Plaintiffs fare no better in their attempt to plead conspiracy circumstantially. The Amended Complaint does not allege any specific ex vessel prices paid by individual Defendants over time or that those prices were allegedly lowered in unison with other Defendants. This failure is telling as Plaintiffs obtained transactional data for every individual ex vessel sale stretching back to 2000. If the data supported Plaintiffs' claims, they would have included it. The Amended Complaint's silence on this basic element of a price-fixing theory is deafening.

Failure to plead either direct evidence of a price-fixing conspiracy or parallel pricing ends the analysis and requires the Court to dismiss each of Plaintiffs' claims, including Plaintiffs' state

1 law claims that, as pled, also require factual allegations to show conspiracy. But even if this 2 Court considered the Amended Complaint’s alleged “plus factors,” those also miss the mark 3 because they point to allegations (in many cases wholly conclusory) consistent with unilateral—4 not collective—conduct, including: industry follow-the-leader pricing; the opportunity or motive 5 to conspire; gathering marketplace price information; and other conduct for which there is an 6 obvious alternative explanation inconsistent with collusion.

7 In addition, Plaintiffs cannot explain away their failure to allege facts supporting their 8 efforts to stretch the statute of limitations back to 2016. Nor does the Amended Complaint cure 9 the absence of factual allegations establishing that Plaintiffs have standing to pursue these 10 antitrust claims. Plaintiffs concede that Little never sold crab to a Defendant during the four-year 11 statute of limitations period, and the Amended Complaint fails to plausibly link his “unnamed” 12 buyers to the alleged conspiracy. Plaintiff Burns is not a crabber, and never participated in the ex 13 vessel market. There are no factual allegations that she was expressly assigned the right to bring 14 antitrust claims that belonged to her deceased husband. Finally, the Opposition offers no 15 justification for the Court to again grant leave to amend.

16 For these reasons, the Court should dismiss this action with prejudice.

17 II. REPLY ARGUMENT

18 A. Plaintiffs’ Arguments Do Not Cure the Amended Complaint’s Failure to Plead a 19 Plausible Coastwide Per Se Unlawful Price-Fixing Conspiracy

20 Plaintiffs bear the burden of pleading more than “a conclusory allegation of agreement at 21 some unidentified point.” Bell Atl. v. Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 557 (2007). Plaintiffs have not 22 met that burden or addressed the same deficiencies the Court found in the original complaint.

23 Plaintiffs wrongly claim that the Motion improperly “dismember[s]” the Amended 24 Complaint rather than viewing it as a whole. (Opp. at 15.) Calling out Plaintiffs’ failure to plead 25 essential facts is not an improper dissection of the Amended Complaint—it demonstrates 26 Plaintiffs’ failure to state a claim. Continental Ore Co. v. Union Carbide & Carbon Corp., 370
27 U.S. 690 (1962), relied on by Plaintiffs, does not “relieve[] plaintiffs of the burden of adequately 28 alleging that a conspiracy to restrain trade existed in the first instance and that each defendant

1 knowingly joined or agreed to participate in the conspiracy.” Jung v. Ass’n of Am. Med. Colls., 2 300 F. Supp. 2d 119, 161 (D.D.C. 2004). “If plaintiffs fail to do so,” Continental Ore does not 3 “shield plaintiffs’ claims from dismissal.” Id. (citation omitted). After all, “the sum of zero and 4 zero is zero.” See Eaton Ergonomics, Inc. v. Rsch. In Motion Corp., 826 F. Supp. 2d 705, 710 5 (S.D.N.Y. 2011). Despite its length, the Amended Complaint lacks factual allegations, as 6 opposed to conclusions, to show each Defendant’s role in the alleged conspiracy and thus 7 provides no basis to infer one. Missing from the Amended Complaint is what is required by 8 Twombly: factual allegations plausibly showing Defendants acted in concert to coordinate ex 9 vessel prices.

10 1. Plaintiffs’ Opposition Misunderstands the Requirements to Plead Direct 11 Evidence of Conspiracy and Why the Amended Complaint Fails to Do So

12 “Direct evidence in a Section 1 conspiracy must be evidence that is explicit and requires 13 no inferences to establish the proposition or conclusion being asserted.” In re Citric Acid Litig., 14 191 F.3d 1090, 1094 (9th Cir. 1999) (quoting In re Baby Food Antitrust Litig., 166 F.3d 112, 118 15 (3d Cir. 1999)). Plaintiffs are correct that an unlawful agreement can be tacit and shown by a 16 “knowing wink.” (Opp. at 22.) But Plaintiffs “must still allege a ‘wink’ or its equivalent[.]” In 17 re Cal. Bail Bond Antitrust Litig., 511 F. Supp. 3d 1031, 1042 n.3 (N.D. Cal. 2021) (citation 18 omitted). Here, the Amended Complaint improperly “assumes a conspiracy first, and then sets 19 out to ‘prove’ it.” Blomkest Fertilizer, Inc. v. Potash Corp. of Saskatchewan, 203 F.3d 1028, 20 1033 (8th Cir. 2000). None of the allegations cited by Plaintiffs (Opp. 17–20) contains facts to 21 establish—without any inferences—the existence of an agreement, express or tacit, to fix prices 22 by any Defendant.

23 Alleged statements by Defendants about prices are not direct evidence of conspiracy.

24 As Plaintiffs readily acknowledge: “Crabbers being who they are and dock talk being what it is, 25 what a crabber paid for a load of crab was soon widely known” among both “members of the 26 fleet” and “the same or different buyers.” (Am. Compl. ¶ 168). Similarly, the unsurprising 27 discussions among ex vessel buyers about prices being offered in the marketplace (Opp. at 17–18; 28 Am. Compl. ¶¶ 180–84, 186–91, 236–40), including statements about prices at which one buyer

1 might be a “hard pass” (¶ 183), what other buyers might be “willing to pay” (¶ 190), or what 2 “crabbers were demanding” (¶ 190), are not direct evidence of an agreement to fix prices. As the 3 court explained in Bail Bond, alleging “various statements” made by Defendants is insufficient 4 when, as here, “nowhere does the [complaint] allege that [either defendant] actually agreed to the 5 conspiracy in the first place.” 511 F. Supp. 3d at 1042.

6 Thus, allegations of commonplace bilateral negotiations between ex vessel buyers and 7 crabbers (Am. Compl. ¶¶ 197–99, 215–19), in which the buyer tells the crabber it will refuse to 8 go higher than another buyer, and instead only will be “matching” (id. ¶¶ 198, 219), also are not 9 direct evidence of conspiracy. Nor are allegations relied on by Plaintiffs (id. ¶¶ 213–14, 220) that 10 do not contain any communications between competitors, or between buyers and sellers, but 11 instead recite Plaintiffs’ editorial narrative.

12 Moreover, many of the “direct evidence” allegations cited by Plaintiffs describe unilateral 13 conduct, not a conspiracy to fix prices. For example, one Defendant’s statement that Pacific 14 Seafood will “make the decision” (Am. Compl. ¶¶ 223–27) about the season opening price is not 15 direct evidence of any agreement among competitors to pay that price or any price. Similarly, 16 allegations that certain Defendants incentivized CI #1 to pay crabbers lower prices (id. ¶ 285), 17 that CI #1 was told he could not offer crabbers higher prices because the port was “locked down”
18 (id. ¶ 291), or that Pacific Seafood sent an email to some buyers “instructing” them to pay no 19 more than $3 per pound (id. ¶ 349), are not direct evidence of any price-fixing conspiracy. None 20 of those communications mentions any agreement among competitors.¹

21 Allegations of “recruiting” are not direct evidence of conspiracy. Other allegations 22 relied on by Plaintiffs fail to advance plausibility because they also assume the existence of a 23 price-fixing cartel. (See Opp. at 18; Am. Compl. ¶¶ 283–85, 289–96, 307–11.) Communications 24 that Plaintiffs characterize as efforts to “recruit” CI #1 to join the conspiracy (id. ¶¶ 283–84) do 25 not show any agreement to fix prices. They are merely CI #1’s recycled complaints, including 26 that Pacific Seafood and others complained and offered incentives (id. ¶¶ 285, 309) when he tried 27

28 ¹ Paragraph 281 refers to an “agreed price,” but in context it relates to the price agreed between buyers and crabbers—not between buyers competing with one another.

1 to offer crabbers higher prices because it would disadvantage other buyers (id. ¶¶ 289, 292–96, 2 307–11), or told him he would not be able to offer the higher prices in certain ports because it was 3 “locked down” (id. ¶¶ 290–91). These communications are typical marketplace chatter, are 4 lawful, and do not show direct evidence of any conspiracy. See, e.g., Persian Gulf Inc. v. BP W.
5 Coast Prods. LLC, 632 F. Supp. 3d 1108, 1144 (S.D. Cal. 2022) (finding “trader communications 6 expressing their preference for low-supply/high-price conditions and the backdrop of general
7 collaboration among Defendants” did not demonstrate a conspiracy).²

8 Allegations of “policing” other crab buyers are not direct evidence of conspiracy.

9 Allegations that Defendants “enforce” the claimed price-fixing agreement (Opp. at 19) again
10 assume the existence of a conspiracy in the first place. Instead of providing any direct evidence 11 of an agreement to fix prices by Defendants, Plaintiffs again focus on CI #1 and extensively 12 catalogue an alleged campaign to drive him “out of business” (Am. Compl. at 55:13–14). Even if 13 true (they are not) these allegations are not direct evidence of conspiracy.

14 For example, Plaintiffs allege that when CI #1 refused incentives from Nor-Cal to lower 15 the price he paid crabbers, Nor-Cal undercut his price and caused retailers to cancel agreements 16 (id. ¶¶ 285–88). Plaintiffs assert that Pacific Seafood interfered with CI #1’s efforts to lease a 17 waterfront property to hinder his ability to pay crabbers higher prices (id. ¶¶ 297–99), spread 18 rumors about CI #1 (id. ¶ 300), and instructed other Defendants not to do business with CI #1 19 (id. ¶¶ 312–13). Plaintiffs allege that a couple Defendants canceled orders to purchase crab from 20 CI #1 when he offered higher prices to crabbers (id. ¶¶ 312–19). The Amended Complaint 21 speculates that Fathom caused a harbormaster to deny CI #1 use of a public hoist for 48 hours, 22 resulting in CI #1 losing ex vessel purchases (id. ¶¶ 320–22). And Plaintiffs allege that after a

24 ² Contrary to Plaintiffs’ argument (Opp. at 22 n.20, 29, 30–31), it is entirely appropriate to rely on 25 summary judgment decisions to aid the court in an “understanding of what constitutes a legally 26 actionable” antitrust conspiracy, and then “applying this legal definition to the pleaded facts.” In 27 re Libor-Based Fin. Instruments Antitrust Litig., No. 11 MDL 2262 NRB, 2015 WL 4634541, at 28 *78 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 4, 2015). Cases cited in support of a motion to dismiss “don’t have to be just at the 12(b)(6) stage,” because “often times cases at summary judgment may explain that area of the law the best. Sometimes the procedural posture of the case is crucial; however, there is nothing wrong with citing to a case in a different procedural posture to show a cause of action’s elements.” Smith v. City of Pelham, No.: 2:17-CV-1320-VEH, 2018 WL 1182605, at *5 (N.D.
Ala. Mar. 7, 2018).

1 meeting among a subset of Defendants, another buyer told CI #1 that those buyers were upset 2 with CI #1 for “broadcasting” a higher opening price than they wanted and that there would be 3 “repercussions,” after which some “renege” on agreements to buy crab from CI #1 and stopped
4 paying CI #1 for crab that had already been delivered to them. (See Am. Compl. ¶¶ 334–43.)
5 None of these allegations are direct evidence of a conspiracy among Defendants to fix prices
6 requiring no inferences—they presume one that is not pled.³

7 Allegations of “punishing” crabbers by “blacklisting” are not direct evidence of 8 conspiracy. Plaintiffs wrongly argue that “blacklisting” crabbers alone is “also direct evidence” 9 of a price-fixing agreement (Opp. at 19–20). The cases cited by Plaintiffs, however, do not 10 support that proposition. They involved factual allegations of a preceding unlawful agreement 11 that was later enforced through boycotts. For example, in Hogan v. Cleveland Ave Restaurant
12 Inc., No. 2:15-CV-2883, 2018 WL 1475398, at *4 (S.D. Ohio Mar. 26, 2018), the plaintiff 13 “alleged a direct, explicit ‘industry agreement’ to employ a price-fixing contract (a copy of which 14 is already in the record)[.]” Similarly, in In re Automobile Antitrust Cases I & II, 1 Cal. App. 5th 15 127, 167 (2016), there was testimony “that one of the key alleged co-conspirators thought that 16 there was a ‘consensus’ among all of the meeting participants to work together to keep Canadian 17 vehicles from crossing the border[.]” No such antecedent agreement is plausibly alleged here.

18 The Amended Complaint does not plead the types of facts that other courts in cases 19 relied on by Plaintiffs found sufficient to allege direct evidence of conspiracy. None of the 20 allegations cited by Plaintiffs contain direct evidence of any conspiracy, and the cases relied upon 21 by Plaintiffs (Opp. at 16–18, 22) are distinguishable because they included well-pled factual 22 allegations providing details of the alleged unlawful agreements.

23 For example, in Kjessler v. Zaappaaz, Inc., No. CV 4:18-0430, 2019 WL 3017132, at *11
24 (S.D. Tex. Apr. 24, 2019) (cleaned up), the complaint alleged “specific, recorded meetings 25 between [defendants] discussing [customized promotional products’] pricing and coordinating 26 future meetings to discuss pricing.” In screenshots of messages, defendants “admitted the so-

27 ³ Plaintiffs also claim that Pacific Seafood “renege” on an agreement to purchase crab from Nor-28 Cal because it failed to match Pacific Seafood’s season opening price (id. ¶ 195). This too is not direct evidence of a conspiracy to fix prices.

1 called cartel exists, attempted to recruit the competitor to the group, and implicated the other 2 Defendants.” Id. at *3. One such message read: “I’m talking to the rest of the wristband
3 companies about matching your prices. Did you want to come up to our prices or do you want us 4 to come down? We stopped under cutting each other last year as it only benefits [G]oogle.” Id.
5 at *4 (citation omitted). The complaint also alleged a conversation “where [defendant] tells [a 6 competitor], ‘that Custom Wristbands was fixing prices as part of the conspiracy.’” Id. at *11 7 n.13 (citation omitted). Similarly, in Flannery Associates LLC v. Barnes Family Ranch
8 Associates, LLC, 727 F. Supp. 3d 895, 910–11 (E.D. Cal. 2024), the complaint contained text 9 messages between defendants referring to their unlawful agreement and shared information about 10 price negotiations with the plaintiff showing that they colluded about how much they should 11 accept to sell their land: “the remaining property owners should be in agreement on what we 12 would want to sell [our] properties ... [and] we should have a meeting in the next two weeks to 13 talk about [Plaintiff].” And in Stanislaus Food Products Co. v. USS-POSCO Industries, No. CV 14 F 09-0560 LJO SMS, 2011 WL 2678879, at *6 (E.D. Cal. July 7, 2011), the complaint alleged the 15 “location and dates of meetings where the Market Allocation agreement was negotiated and 16 finalized.” Nothing in the Amended Complaint comes close to such direct evidence allegations.

17 Plaintiffs misconstrue the significance of the Oregon statute authorizing pricing
18 discussions. Finally, the Opposition misunderstands the application of the state action doctrine 19 and the reason Defendants have raised it. (Opp. at 23–25.) Defendants are not seeking a finding 20 of nonliability on an affirmative defense through this Motion. Instead, the Motion addresses the 21 alleged December 2023 meeting and explains it in the context of the state action doctrine to show 22 that it is unreasonable to infer that the solitary instance alleged in the Amended Complaint where 23 some Defendants “expressed a uniform position” on price can form a basis for antitrust liability.
24 (Mot. at 21–23; Am. Compl. ¶¶ 227–28; Opp. at 18.) The Oregon regulatory program provides a 25 common-sense explanation for a lawful meeting of competitors to discuss the season opening 26 price and renders Plaintiffs’ alleged price-fixing conspiracy all the more implausible. Notably, 27 Plaintiffs now contend (Opp. at 25 n.23) that even at the December meeting, there was no 28

1 agreement reached by some Defendants to set an opening price, which further confirms that the 2 Amended Complaint fails to plead direct evidence of a conspiracy.

3 2. Plaintiffs Fail to Plead Circumstantial Evidence of a Conspiracy

4 a. Plaintiffs Cannot Escape Their Failure to Plead Facts Showing 5 Parallel Pricing

6 Plaintiffs' theory of the case is that Defendants engaged in a "pricing cartel that has 7 artificially fixed, depressed, and controlled the ex vessel price paid to crabbers in the Pacific NW 8 Area" since 2016. (Am. Compl. ¶ 8; Opp. at 26–27.) A pricing cartel, by definition, requires that 9 "Defendants actually charged higher prices and that they did so in parallel." Flextronics Int'l 10 USA, Inc. v. Murata Mfg. Co., No. 19-cv-00078-EJD, 2020 WL 51016851, at *15 (N.D. Cal.
11 Aug. 31, 2020). Plaintiffs fail to allege facts showing such parallel pricing. It is true that parallel 12 pricing "need not be exactly simultaneous and identical" (Opp. at 28), but Plaintiffs offer no 13 factual allegations to show, let alone compare, ex vessel prices paid by Defendants or other 14 buyers over any period of time. To the contrary, Plaintiffs admit the Amended Complaint alleges 15 Defendants used a variety of means to price differently.⁴ (Opp. at 10-11.)

16 It is no answer for Plaintiffs to point to their graph of coastwide ex vessel prices since 17 2016 relative to prices in the Puget Sound market either. (Opp. at 26.) Comparing average prices 18 in one market to another market says nothing about the individual prices Defendants paid to 19 crabbers and whether those prices moved in unison. (Mot. at 24–25.) "If data points are lumped 20 together and averaged before the analysis, the averaging compromises the ability to tease 21 meaningful relationships out of the data." In re Graphics Processing Units Antitrust Litig., 253

23 ⁴ To the extent Plaintiffs argue that Defendants engaged in similar nonprice conduct (Opp. at 27), 24 there are no factual allegations to demonstrate how, for example, prices were suppressed by 25 Defendants supplying one another in ports where they lack a presence, nor could there be as total 26 supply remained unchanged (Opp. at 3). There also are no allegations of any antecedent 27 agreement to do so and to prevent "white van buyers" from purportedly driving up ex vessel 28 prices. Contrary to Plaintiffs' argument, it is entirely lawful for competitors to supply products to one another. Such "exchange agreements have long been recognized as procompetitive in purpose and effect, enabling or facilitating companies to compete in product and/or geographical and/or temporal markets in which they otherwise could not or would not compete as efficiently or at all." Persian Gulf, 632 F. Supp. 3d at 1138–39 (dismissing claim on summary judgment for alleged price-fixing conspiracy (citation omitted)).

1 F.R.D. 478, 493 (N.D. Cal. 2008). As a result, “[a]veraging” prices to demonstrate alleged 2 price-fixing “masks the differences and by definition glides over what may be important 3 differences” in actual prices paid by antitrust defendants. Id. at 494.

4 This failure to even attempt to plead parallel pricing is inexcusable. Before filing the 5 Amended Complaint, Plaintiffs obtained transaction-level data (indicating the price, buyer, and 6 port) for each ex vessel sale of Dungeness crab in California, Oregon, and Washington going 7 back to 2000. (Dkts. 60, 217.) Presumably, an analysis of the data would have been included if it 8 showed Defendants paid the same ex vessel prices at the season opening or at any other time.
9 That the Amended Complaint relies instead on irrelevant average pricing is telling.

10 Acknowledging that prices were not the same, Plaintiffs argue (Opp. at 29–30) that even 11 “frequent” price deviation is immaterial because the theory of their case is an alleged coastwide 12 conspiracy to set a uniform season starting price in each port. Plaintiffs point to cases that stand 13 for the proposition that an agreement among competitors to fix a starting point for price
14 negotiations, such as a manufacturer’s list price, violates Section 1 even though actual prices paid 15 may differ from the starting point and vary from transaction to transaction. However, the 16 Amended Complaint fails to plead an antecedent unlawful agreement to set the starting point. For 17 that reason, and others, the authorities relied upon by Plaintiffs are distinguishable.

18 For instance, in Plymouth Dealers’ Association of Northern California v. United States, 19 279 F.2d 128 (9th Cir. 1960), which arguably concerned direct (not circumstantial) evidence of 20 conspiracy, an automobile dealers’ association was convicted of criminal violations of the 21 Sherman Act for publishing a price list and circulating it to its members. The evidence showed 22 that the dealers in most instances used the list prices only as a starting point and then competed 23 with each other by negotiating different (lower) prices with consumers who purchased the 24 automobiles. Id. at 132. As the court observed in that case, “common sense tells us that there is 25 no need for competitors to meet, agree upon content, print and circularize ‘list prices’ that are 26 never to be looked at.” Id. at 133. Here, in stark contrast, there are no factual allegations, or even 27 arguments in the Opposition, that Defendants (and possibly numerous other buyers) met, agreed 28

1 upon ex vessel prices they would pay to fishermen, printed a list of those prices, and circulated 2 the list.

3 The conclusory allegations of the Amended Complaint also contrast sharply with factual 4 allegations that the Ninth Circuit found sufficient to permit an inference of parallel pricing in 5 Flextronics International USA, Inc. v. Panasonic Holdings Corp., No. 22-15231, 2023 WL 6 4677017, at *1 (9th Cir. July 21, 2023), cited by Plaintiffs (Opp. at 26 n.25). In that case, the 7 operative complaint included a statistical analysis that used plaintiff’s own purchase data to 8 demonstrate that the prices charged by defendants “always moved in parallel, and prices remained 9 stubbornly stable” throughout the alleged conspiracy period. 2023 WL 4677017, at *1. The 10 statistical analysis showed that prices “exhibited similar trend lines over time and were nearly 11 identical” after the beginning of the conspiracy and included specific examples of price 12 comparisons in which multiple defendants had substantially similar prices during a particular 13 month. Id. Here, the Amended Complaint lacks any factual allegations to show that the 14 Defendants paid the same ex vessel price over time, or at any given point in time. This failure 15 alone precludes Plaintiffs from stating a claim for violation of Section 1 based on circumstantial
16 evidence. (Mot. at 24.)

17 b. Plaintiffs Have No Answer for Their Failure to Plead Plus Factors
18 Showing Defendants’ Actions Are Inconsistent with Unilateral
19 Conduct

20 Even if Plaintiffs had plausibly alleged that Defendants engaged in parallel pricing, the 21 Amended Complaint fails to allege factually-supported plus factors as required to plead a 22 conspiracy using circumstantial evidence. (Mot. at 26–31.) Plaintiffs’ claims that Defendants 23 “improperly argue the facts” (Opp. at 21) and their request that the Court adopt “their preferred 24 inference” (id. at 29) or “alternative theories” (id. at 36) misunderstand the Ninth Circuit’s 25 admonition that district courts must consider “obvious alternative explanations for a defendant’s 26 behavior when analyzing plausibility” of an alleged anticompetitive agreement. name.space, Inc.
27 v. Internet Corp. for Assigned Names & Nos., 795 F.3d 1124, 1130 (9th Cir. 2015) (citation 28 omitted); see also Knievel v. ESPN, 393 F.3d 1068 (9th Cir. 2005) (affirming order granting 1 motion to dismiss that relied on material not alleged in the complaint, including webpages).

2 Here, each alleged plus factor is consistent with self-interested, unilateral conduct.

3 Alleged “price leadership” does not show conduct against economic self-interest.

4 Plaintiffs maintain that Defendants acted against economic self-interest because they should have 5 “broken ranks” to pay higher ex vessel prices to try to capture a greater share of supply (Opp. at 6 33, 35–36), and argue that the Court should ignore the well-established principle that “follow-the-7 leader” pricing routinely occurs in the absence of an unlawful agreement (Mot. at 27-29).

8 Plaintiffs’ theory, however, was rejected in Evanston Police Pension Fund v. McKesson 9 Corp., 411 F. Supp. 3d 580, 596 (N.D. Cal. 2019). In that case, the plaintiff argued that it would 10 be “economically irrational” not to undercut a competitor’s price “in a genuinely competitive 11 market, because it foregoes an opportunity to increase market share by offering better prices” and 12 “[e]rgo, [defendant’s] pricing evidences collusion.” Id. But as the court there explained: 13 “Musical Instruments rejects this syllogism for ‘fail[ing] to account for conscious parallelism and 14 the pressures of an interdependent market.’” Id. (citation omitted). Instead, as in the present 15 case, “‘so long as prices can be easily readjusted without persistent negative consequences,’” then 16 “‘one firm can risk being the first to raise prices, confident that if its price is followed, all firms 17 will benefit.’” Id. (citation omitted). Thus, “‘[f]ollow the leader’ pricing” can be economically 18 rational “without any unlawful agreement.” Id.

19 The conduct alleged by Plaintiffs here is fully consistent with lawful “follow-the-leader” 20 pricing and does not suffice to plead facts from which it is permissible to infer conspiracy. See 21 id. (citing In re Musical Instruments & Equip. Antitrust Litig., 798 F.3d 1186, 1195 (9th Cir.
22 2015)). The Ninth Circuit, and numerous other courts, have recognized that follow-the-leader 23 competition is “more consistent with conscious parallelism than with the plus factor recognized 24 by the Twombly court.” In re Dynamic Random Access Memory (DRAM) Indirect Purchaser
25 Antitrust Litig., 28 F.4th 42, 48 (9th Cir. 2022); see also In re German Auto. Mfrs. Antitrust Litig., 26 612 F. Supp. 3d 967, 986 (N.D. Cal. 2020) (granting motion to dismiss and observing that 27 “‘follow the leader’ pricing ... is a well-recognized form of lawful conscious parallelism”); In re 28 Packaged Seafood Prods. Antitrust Litig., No. 15-MD-2670 DMS, 2023 WL 3046073, at *8 (Apr.

21, 2023) (“a § 1 violation cannot be inferred from parallel pricing alone, or from an industry’s follow-the-leader pricing strategy”) (quoting Home Depot, U.S.A., Inc. v. E.I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., No. 16cv04865-BLF, 2019 WL 3804667, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Aug. 13, 2019)); In re Late Fee & Over-Limit Fee Litig., 528 F. Supp. 2d 953, 964 (N.D. Cal. 2007) (granting motion to dismiss and observing that “[a] section 1 violation cannot ... be inferred from ... an industry’s follow-the-leader pricing strategy”) (quoting In re Citric Acid Litig., 191 F.3d at 1102), aff’d, 741 F.3d 1022 (9th Cir. 2014)). “Following the example set by a competitor, without agreeing to do so in advance, is textbook ‘price leadership’—a practice [many courts] have repeatedly stated is insufficient to establish the existence of an agreement” in violation of Section 1. Quality Auto Painting Ctr. v. State Farm Ins. Co., 917 F.3d 1249, 1264 (11th Cir. 2019) (affirming order granting motion to dismiss).⁵

Market “concentration” is a neutral factor. Plaintiffs next argue that alleged characteristics of the Pacific Northwest area market make it “highly susceptible to” a conspiracy to fix prices because of a “high concentration of buying power in Defendants.” (Opp. at 34.) That argument ignores the alleged marketplace realities undermining this claim, including that there are 1,400 crabbers (Am. Compl. ¶ 1) and hundreds of ex vessel direct purchasers (id. ¶ 151). The alleged combined market share of the 34 Defendants also cannot tip the scales in favor of plausibility. As one court observed, “the relevant market in Twombly—where defendants were alleged to possess a 90% share—was more highly concentrated, and the Supreme Court nevertheless concluded that the complaint there failed to state a claim under section 1.” In re Late Fee and Over-Limit Fee Litig., 528 F. Supp. 2d at 964. Often, as here, “allegations concerning market characteristics are ... just as likely to be consistent with innocent as unlawful behavior” and as a result “the features of the market and its structure are therefore neutral facts.” Jones v. Micron Tech. Inc., 400 F. Supp. 3d 897, 917 (N.D. Cal. 2019) (citations omitted).

⁵ Plaintiffs’ argument that Defendants should have “broken ranks” and increased offering prices also is inconsistent with their allegations that at the start of the crab season there is a massive oversupply of crab. (Am. Compl. ¶ 155; Opp. at 2-3.)

1 “Opportunities to conspire” do not permit inference of agreement. Plaintiffs argue that 2 allegations that Defendants had opportunities to collude and fix prices, including through trade 3 associations, is a plus factor. (Opp. at 2 n.5, 34.) “The Supreme Court rejected similar 4 allegations in Twombly ... and other courts have consistently refused to infer the existence of a 5 conspiracy from these kinds of averments.” In re Late Fee and Over-Limit Fee Litig., 528 F.
6 Supp. 2d at 963–64; see also In re Citric Acid Litig., 191 F.3d at 1098 (“Gathering information 7 about pricing and competition in the industry is standard fare for trade associations.”). Similarly, 8 “communications between competitors do not permit an inference of an agreement to fix prices 9 unless ‘those communications rise to the level of an agreement, tacit or otherwise.’” In re Baby
10 Food Antitrust Litig., 166 F.3d at 126 (citation omitted). As for alleged opportunities to collude 11 (Opp. at 2 n.5), the Amended Complaint “does not allege that any [] Defendant learned of or 12 agreed to join the conspiracy at any of these meetings, or any details of who attended them or 13 what was discussed.” Bail Bond, 511 F. Supp. 3d at 1049. Thus, Plaintiffs’ allegations that 14 Defendants had opportunities to conspire by meeting and communicating with one another are 15 insufficient to constitute a plus factor from which it is permissible to infer a Section 1 conspiracy.

16 “Motive to conspire” is not enough. Plaintiffs argue (Opp. at 18) that Defendants have a 17 motive to conspire to suppress ex vessel prices, which the Court should credit as a plus factor.
18 But well-established law teaches that a motive to conspire does not suggest conspiracy. See In re 19 Late Fee & Over-Limit Fee Litig., 528 F. Supp. 2d at 964 (allegations of motive are “‘never 20 enough’” (citation omitted)). “[I]f ‘a motive to achieve higher prices’ were sufficient, every 21 company in every industry could be accused of conspiracy because they all ‘would have such a 22 motive.’” Id. (citations omitted). Stated differently, “common motive does not suggest an 23 agreement” because “[a]ny firm that believes that it could increase profits by raising prices has a 24 motive to reach an advance agreement with its competitors.” Musical Instruments, 798 F.3d at 25 1194. Thus, in Musical Instruments the Ninth Circuit concluded that “alleging ‘common motive 26 to conspire’ simply restates that a market is interdependent (i.e., that the profitability of a firm’s 27 decisions regarding pricing depends on a competitor’s reactions).” Id. at 1195. “And allegations 28

1 of parallel conduct—though recast as common motive—is insufficient to plead a § 1 violation.”
2 Id. (citing Twombly, 550 U.S. at 556–57).

3 “Gathering competitors’ price information” is lawful and procompetitive. Finally, 4 Plaintiffs are incorrect that allegations that some Defendants gathered information about other 5 Defendants’ ex vessel prices support an inference of conspiracy. (Opp. at 34–35.) Possessing 6 information about a competitor’s prices is not circumstantial evidence of conspiracy, and absent an 7 agreement among competitors to exchange price information, is not unlawful. See In re Baby
8 Food Antitrust Litig., 166 F.3d at 126 (“Gathering competitors’ price information can be consistent 9 with independent competitor behavior.”). In Citric Acid, for example, the Ninth Circuit held that 10 evidence that the defendant’s “files contained copies of competitors’ price lists” did not permit an 11 inference of conspiracy. 191 F.3d at 1103. The court observed that plaintiff failed to make any 12 “showing ... that there was an agreement to exchange pricing information” and that “[t]here are 13 many legal ways in which [the defendant] could have obtained pricing information on 14 competitors.” Id. (citation omitted). Here, too, there are no factual allegations in the Amended 15 Complaint to show any agreement to exchange pricing information and therefore no basis from 16 which to infer a conspiracy to fix ex vessel prices.

17 B. Plaintiffs’ Arguments Cannot Transform Defective Group Pleading Allegations into 18 Defendant-Specific Allegations of Fact Required to State a Plausible Claim

19 Plaintiffs do not dispute that they must plausibly allege that each Defendant “joined the 20 conspiracy and played some role in it.” (Opp. at 37.) Despite that, Plaintiffs insist that the 21 alleged nonspecific, scattershot, and random communications between certain representatives of a 22 handful of Defendants satisfy their burden of pleading a plausible nine-year, coastwide, price-23 fixing conspiracy involving all Defendants. (Id. at 20–21.) They do not.

24 Plaintiffs contend that the Amended Complaint includes allegations stretching back to 25 2015–2019, but the paragraphs Plaintiffs cite do not support that conclusion. (Id. at 20.)
26 Paragraphs 7–8 simply state the conclusion that “Defendants ... created a pricing cartel ... since 27 the beginning of the 2015/16 season.” Paragraph 54 refers to an irrelevant settlement in another 28 lawsuit in 2017. Paragraphs 170 to 174 allege statements by three individuals that one crabber

1 would not see prices as high as the 2015/16 season—the highest prices ever paid. Paragraphs 250
2 to 252 allege that Pacific Seafood owns 49% of Ocean Gold. Paragraph 266 alleges the City of 3 Eureka terminated a hoist lease. And paragraph 388 alleges that Hallmark and Nor-Cal are 4 dominant buyers in Port Orford, Oregon. None of these paragraphs comes close to pleading 5 necessary, specific allegations of concerted action or participation in a conspiracy by any 6 Defendants stretching back to 2015—let alone all.

7 Plaintiffs next argue that the Amended Complaint includes sufficient allegations of 8 conspiratorial conduct for the 2020/21 and 2021/22 seasons. (Id. at 20–21.) But the single text 9 message between Bornstein and Ocean King does not remotely support a price-fixing 10 conspiracy—it states that crabbers were asking $2.75, and that Pacific Seafood was at $2.50 but 11 later agreed to meet crabbers’ demand at $2.75 (as did Bornstein). (Am. Compl. ¶¶ 187–91.) For 12 the 2021/22 season, Plaintiffs argue that the allegations are not limited to a single text between 13 Nor-Cal and an unidentified crabber. (Opp. at 20–21.) But the only additional allegation for that 14 entire season alleges that a crabber who usually sold in Port Orford instead sold his crab that year 15 in Charleston to obtain higher prices. (Opp. at 21 (citing Am. Compl. ¶¶ 390–91).) This single 16 allegation is entirely insufficient to establish a conspiracy spanning the 2021/22 season.

17 Plaintiffs also cannot refute Defendants’ claim that the Amended Complaint fails to allege 18 any conspiracy allegations for several Defendants—instead pleading only unilateral conduct.
19 (Opp. at 39–42.)

- 20 • South Bend Defendants. For the South Bend Defendants, Plaintiffs admit that the only 21 allegation is that they “control” a hoist in Eureka and sell some crab to other Defendants.
22 (Id. at 39.) This overstates the allegations, which provide only that South Bend “leases a 23 portion of the Fishermen’s Terminal Facility.” (Am. Compl. ¶ 268.) But, more 24 importantly, the allegations state only unilateral—not conspiratorial—conduct.
- 25 • Caito Defendants. Plaintiffs argue that they have pled sufficient facts to show successor 26 liability of Southwind Foods, LLC (“Southwind”), but fail to point to allegations showing 27 conspiratorial conduct to which such successor liability would apply. Plaintiffs point only 28 to a statement from John Caito, which they stretch to say that he sold his company to Southwind “to insulate himself from liability related to this lawsuit.” (Opp. at 40 (citing Am. Compl. ¶ 93).) This too is unilateral—not conspiratorial—conduct.
- Ocean Gold. For Ocean Gold, Plaintiffs claim the Motion “mischaracterized” allegations concerning Ocean Gold’s hoists and omitted allegations regarding Pacific Seafood’s connections with Ocean Gold. (Id. at 41.) Those allegations were not ignored or mischaracterized. (Mot. at 18.) The allegations concerning the hoist are unilateral

1 conduct of Ocean Gold and do not support any claim that it joined or participated in any 2 price-fixing conspiracy. The allegations that Pacific Seafood owns 49% of Ocean Gold, and markets its seafood to downstream buyers, also are irrelevant. (Id. at 14, n.6.)

- 3 • Ocean King, ASE, Fishermen’s Catch, Global Quality and Nor-Cal. For Ocean King 4 and Nor-Cal, Plaintiffs claim the allegations show they “actively discussed a price-fixing 5 agreement.” (Resp. at 42 (citing Am. Compl. ¶¶ 171, 187–91, 195–99, 234–42, 262–64, 6 285–89, 307–10).) Those allegations do not discuss any price-fixing agreement, and 7 instead reflect unilateral conduct. The only allegation that relates to a pricing decision is 8 Nor-Cal’s statement to one crabber in November 2021 that it would be “matching” Pacific Seafood’s price. (Am. Compl. ¶¶ 196–99.) But such “follow-the-leader” pricing is “more consistent with conscious parallelism” than a price-fixing conspiracy. DRAM, 28 F.4th at 48; see also Section II.A.2.b, supra. Nor do the allegations that these Defendants purchase from other Defendants in ports where they do not have a presence demonstrate participation in a price-fixing agreement. See n. 4, supra.

9 No amount of reading the Amended Complaint “holistically” can make up for the lack of 10 specific, factual allegations showing each Defendant joined the alleged conspiracy and had a role 11 in it. (Opp. at 20 (citing Cont’l Ore, 370 U.S. 690).) “‘If the warning [in Continental Ore] 12 against “compartmentalizing” an antitrust conspiracy were meant to prevent a court from 13 breaking down a plaintiff’s allegation of a “unitary” conspiracy into its component parts for 14 purposes of analysis, the Court would not have engaged in the “forbidden” analysis in the very 15 same opinion in which it issued the warning.’” In re Processed Egg Prods. Antitrust Litig., 962 16 F.3d 719, 727 (3d Cir. 2020) (citation omitted). Plaintiffs simply fail to plead plausible facts 17 demonstrating the claimed nine-year, coastwide conspiracy, among all 34 Defendants. For this 18 separate reason, the Motion should be granted.

19 C. Plaintiffs’ Arguments Do Not Cure the Amended Complaint’s Failure to Plead State 20 Law and Declaratory Judgment Claims

21 Plaintiffs do not address the grounds in the Motion for dismissing their claims for 22 violations of the Cartwright Act or the UCL, or for declaratory judgment (Mot. at 36–38), except 23 to argue that the Amended Complaint pleads a claim for violation of the “unfairness” prong of the 24 UCL. (Opp. at 42–45.) Plaintiffs are incorrect.

25 Although “‘conspiracy is not an element of an unfair competition law cause of action in 26 the abstract as a matter of law,’” Plaintiffs “‘cannot deny that conspiracy is indeed a component 27 of the unfair cause of action in this case as a matter of fact.’” William O. Gilley Enters., Inc. v.
28 Atl. Richfield Co., 588 F.3d 659, 663 (9th Cir. 2009) (quoting Aguilar v. Atl. Richfield Co., 25

1 Cal.4th 826, 866–67 (2001)). Plaintiffs’ UCL claim, as pled, depends upon the same allegations 2 of an unlawful agreement by all Defendants as alleged in support of their Section 1 and 3 Cartwright Act claims. (Am. Compl. ¶¶ 442–47.) Plaintiffs therefore fail to state a claim for 4 violation of the UCL under the unfairness prong because the Amended Complaint does not 5 contain factual allegations necessary to plead a plausible conspiracy.⁶

6 D. Plaintiffs’ Arguments Do Not Cure the Amended Complaint’s Failure to Plead a 7 Basis for Tolling the Statute of Limitations

8 Plaintiffs claim they adequately pled fraudulent concealment tolling based on allegations 9 of “affirmative misrepresentations of fact alone.” (Opp. at 45–46.) The single case they cite, 10 however, Hightower v. Celestron Acquisition, LLC, No. 20-CV-03639-EJD, 2021 WL 2224148, 11 at *6–8 (N.D. Cal. June 2, 2021), articulates and analyzes the required three elements as set out in 12 the Motion—not misrepresentations alone. Plaintiffs next argue that they need not specify the 13 date, time, or place of the alleged affirmative misrepresentations required to plead fraudulent 14 concealment. (Opp. at 47.) But that is precisely what Rule 9(b)’s heightened-pleading 15 requirements mandate. (See Mot. at 32–33 (citing cases).) Plaintiffs’ failure to allege the “who, 16 what, where, when, and how” of the claimed fraudulent concealment is dispositive. Garrison v.
17 Oracle Corp., 159 F. Supp. 3d 1044, 1075 (N.D. Cal. 2016). Nor are Plaintiffs correct that tolling 18 should not be resolved at the pleading stage. (See Mot. at 32-23 (citing cases rejecting fraudulent 19 concealment tolling on motions to dismiss).)

20 Plaintiffs also are wrong that the Amended Complaint includes sufficient allegations for 21 fraudulent concealment tolling. Plaintiffs claim that Pacific Seafood misrepresented to crabbers 22 that demand was weak during the 2022/23 season. (Opp. at 46–47.) But the allegations do not 23 support that crabbers—also market participants—had no actual or constructive knowledge of the 24 true demand for their catch. Hightower, 2021 WL 2224148, at *6 (tolling requires allegations 25 that “plaintiff did not have actual or constructive knowledge”). Indeed, the Amended Complaint 26 alleges crabbers were aware of “high consumer demand” during the 2022/23 season. (Am.

27 ⁶ As an independent basis for dismissal, the Amended Complaint also fails to plead unilateral 28 conduct that harmed competition. See Cal. Crane Sch., Inc. v. Google LLC, 722 F. Supp. 3d 1026, 1041 (N.D. Cal. 2024).

1 Compl. ¶¶ 205–07 (alleging crabbers received $9.75 and $10/lb. in the Puget Sound during 2 2022/23 season).) Moreover, these statements were during the 2022/23 season, and Plaintiffs 3 allege no such statements before March 2019 that might permit extending the statute of 4 limitations further.

5 In the alternative, Plaintiffs now claim that they also pled “continuing violation tolling,” 6 citing paragraph 425. (Opp. at 50.) That paragraph, under the heading “Delayed 7 Discovery/Fraudulent Concealment,” includes the conclusory allegation—“continuing nature of 8 Defendants’ conspiracy”—but does so in summarizing prior allegations of fraudulent 9 concealment. Plaintiffs nowhere plead the elements of continuing violation tolling, including a 10 “new and independent” overt act that inflicts “new and accumulating injury on the plaintiff.” (Id.
11 (reciting elements of continuing violation tolling (emphasis added))). Plaintiffs argue that such 12 overt acts were pled as to CI #1 during the 2023/24 season. (Id.) But CI #1 is not the plaintiff 13 and is not even a crabber. CI #1 is crab buyer. The Amended Complaint fails to plausibly allege 14 tolling to permit Plaintiffs to pursue claims predating March 13, 2019.

15 E. Plaintiffs’ Arguments and “New Facts” Do Not Cure the Amended Complaint’s
16 Failure to Plead Standing to Assert Antitrust Claims Against Defendants

17 Plaintiffs claim that Little suffered antitrust injury because “Little sold to both Unnamed 18 Co-conspirator #1 and Unnamed Co-conspirator #2 on or after March 19, 2019.” (Opp. at 51.)
19 But none of the allegations in the Amended Complaint plausibly allege that either unnamed party 20 joined the alleged conspiracy or their role in it. (Mot. at 35–36.) And as explained above, the 21 Amended Complaint fails to allege tolling to permit Little to sue over sales to Pacific Seafood 22 made more than four years before this lawsuit was filed.

23 As to Burns, Plaintiffs claim that she is her late husband’s “successor in interest” and 24 “personal representative,” citing counsel’s declaration purporting to attach a filing that Burns 25 served as personal representative for her husband’s estate. (Opp. at 52.) The Amended 26 Complaint, however, does not so allege and Plaintiffs may not amend their complaint through 27 briefs in opposition to a motion to dismiss. See, e.g., Schneider v. Cal. Dep’t of Corr., 151 F.3d 28 1194, 1197 n.1 (9th Cir. 1998). Moreover, neither the Amended Complaint nor the estate

1 document submitted by counsel establishes that Burns was assigned, devised or bequeathed her 2 late husband's antitrust claims through administration of his estate.

3 The single case relied upon by Plaintiffs, Howes v. Yankton Medical Clinic, P.C., No. 15-4 CV-04177-KES, 2016 WL 4385898 (D.S.D. Aug. 17, 2016), also does not abrogate the 5 well-established principle that non-market participants must show an express assignment of 6 antitrust claims for there to be antitrust standing. (Mot. at 36 (citing cases).) No party in Howes 7 argued that an express assignment was required, so the Howes court did not evaluate whether the 8 surviving spouse could pursue her deceased husband's claims. Moreover, the surviving spouse in 9 Howes was also denied care and thus had antitrust injury in her own right. Id. at *4 ("Here, 10 plaintiffs were denied care In sum, plaintiffs have antitrust standing" (emphasis added)).
11 Burns has failed to allege she suffered antitrust injury by virtue of her husband's ex vessel crab 12 sales during the alleged class period, or possesses any right to assert his claims.

13 F. Plaintiffs Have Not Refuted Defendants' Showing That Further Amendment Would 14 Be Futile and the Amended Complaint Should Be Dismissed with Prejudice

15 In their final paragraph, Plaintiffs ask this Court to grant them leave to amend if any 16 portion of the Motion is granted. (Opp. at 55.) But Ninth Circuit law is clear: when a district 17 court grants leave to amend as this Court previously did, but the party fails to remedy earlier 18 deficiencies, the Court in its discretion may dismiss without further amendment. Williams v.
19 California, 764 F.3d 1002, 1018 (9th Cir. 2014). That is the case here. This Court dismissed 20 Plaintiffs' previous complaint because the allegations were "not specific enough to support a 21 plausible 'multi-hundred-member buyer's cartel.'" (Dkt. 59, at 4.) The Amended Complaint is 22 more of the same—disconnected and sporadic "instances" and "occurrences" in "only some 23 geographic areas" (id.), and an airing of grievances by CI #1. Plaintiffs have now, twice, fully 24 failed to plausibly allege facts supporting a plausible, multi-year, coastwide, price-fixing 25 conspiracy, despite this Court's clear direction. Plaintiffs' repeated failures to remedy pleading 26 deficiencies demonstrates that further leave to amend will be futile. Rutman Wine Co. v. E. & J.
27 Gallo Winery, 829 F.2d 729, 738 (9th Cir. 1987) (affirming dismissal with prejudice where 28 amended complaint failed to remedy defects identified by district court in prior complaint).

III. CONCLUSION

For all of these reasons, the Court should dismiss the Amended Complaint with prejudice for failure to state a claim pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6).
